Professor Dr.-Eng. Cui Yuansheng

Prof. Dr.-Eng. Cui Yuansheng studied construction engineering at the faculty of civil engineering of the Harbin Institute of Technology, China, and was also awarded a bachelor's degree in the field of cement technology. After graduating from university he worked for Surabuli Cement in Thailand in connection with the consulting service for erection of cement works by a group of Chinese experts. Professor Cui is vice president, general engineer, director of the Science & Technology Committee, and director of the Assessment Committee and holds technical posts at both the intermediate and high levels of the Institute of Technical Information for Building Materials Industry of China (ITIBMIC). He is also deputy managing director of the National Cement Information Network (NCIN). He was awarded first prize at the ministry level for the research project "The Development of the Strategy of the Building Materials Industry of China Across the Century", and also made important proposals in the research project "The Direction of the Restructuring of the Chinese Cement Industry". He masterminded and successfully organized the first Beijing International Cement & Equipment Exhibition. Professor Cui founded and holds the position of editor-in-chief to the Chinese-based magazine CEMENT and the Chinese-based magazine RMC (Ready-Mixed Concrete).
